These names are believed to encompass all aspects of Allah's nature, from mercy and compassion to power and justice. Islamic scholars assert that knowing and invoking these names in prayer facilitates spiritual growth and a deeper connection with God. The Qur'an itself references many of these attributes, such as "Ar-Rahman" (The Most Merciful) and "Al-Malik" (The King), reinforcing their foundational role in Muslim faith. While the precise list can vary slightly across different Islamic traditions, the core names remain consistent. Over centuries, Muslim theologians, mystics, and scholars have meticulously studied these names, integrating them into spiritual exercises and theological discourse.
